

UWIRE

THE COLLEGE NETWORK

Arts & Entertainment » News » Opinion » Sports » Uncategorized

You are here: Home » WHLDC awards $2 million in grants to 83 community non-profits

WHLDC awards $2 million in grants to 83 community non-profits

Posted on 23 March 2013.

The West Harlem Local Development Corporation announced the winners of about $2 million in grants for local nonprofits during a ceremony Thursday, a move that will fund 83 neighborhood organizations serving residents of West Harlem.

The grants, which are expected to reach almost 12,000 people in West Harlem, fund local programs ranging from workforce training to gymnastics to opera, and represent the largest expenditures to date of the WHLDC, which is responsible for doling out $76 million promised by Columbia as a part of the Community Benefits Agreement signed in May of 2009.

"It's a wonderful, wonderful feeling to know, after many years on this board, that we've finally reached the day where we're going to see the funds allocated in the community," Kofi Boateng, the executive director of the development corporation said at a Community Board 9 meeting Thursday evening.

Programs received grants ranging from $5,000 to $50,000, and are required to use them on projects that primarily benefit residents in Community Board 9, which includes Morningside Heights, Manhattanville, and Hamilton Heights. Although living in these neighborhoods is not a requirement for receiving funding, Boateng said 39 of the 83 winners are based in the CB9 area, and that they won a total of $977,000.

"They represent diversity in focus—there are arts and cultural, education groups . . . which fulfill different needs," Boateng said at the celebration of the grant recipients Thursday morning at Our Children's Foundation on 125th Street.

Grant recipients said they were excited to receive a chunk of the funds and ready to work on a variety of programs within the community. Max Rodriguez, founder of the Harlem Book Fair, said the organization received $12,000 for its "Cool Boyz Read" program, which offers weekly reading programs for male third- and fourth-graders at a West Harlem school.

"It's amazing to be acknowledged as a steward of Harlem's future," said Rodriguez, who remarked that expanding reading would help "break the school-to-prison pipeline" in disadvantaged neighborhoods. "I'm just ecstatic."

Not all has been smooth sailing for the corporation. Since the group was founded in 2009, locals have criticized it for being inefficient and ineffective. Until Thursday, the group had only given out a single grant. The controversies prompted a leadership shuffle in April 2012, with Boateng being appointed director. An investigation by State Attorney General Eric Schneiderman completed in December found no misuse of

Submit Press Release

Follow UWIRE on Twitter

Main news feed: @UWIRE
Arts section: @UWIREArts
Sports section: @UWIRESports
Opinion section: @UWIREOpinion
PR service: @UWIREPR

Recent UWIRE PR Releases

Legendary Investors to Judge 2013 Sohn Investment Contest - March 20, 2013

How to Get Spring Break Or Basketball Playoff Hotels at Up To 50% Off - March 19, 2013

Spring Break Beauty Made Simple - March 18, 2013

AkzoNobel Opens 'Tomorrow's Answers Today' Post-Graduate Contest - March 11, 2013

MIT STUDENT INVENTOR NIKOLAI BEGG RECEIVES LEVELSON-MIT STUDENT PRIZE - March 6, 2013

Filmmaker Challenges Univ Students to Join Immigration Reform Campaign - March 4, 2013

Mt. Sinai Eliminates Pre-Med Reqs for Accepted College Sophomores - February 27, 2013

View All UWIRE PR College Press Releases

Most Recent Stories

Schlemer scores 24, but Mustangs fall to No. 3 Penn State

FGCU becomes first 15 seed to reach round of 16

Relaxed vs. Natural: African American women discuss hair

Texas evens the series with a 2-1 walk-off victory over Red Raiders

Men finish 13th in Georgia

Habitat partakes in all-women build, 'Hard Hats and High Heels'

CSU lacrosse seeking to continue undefeated record against Chapman University

Cal in NCAA Salary Madness Championships

Bangor's growth in music scene good for UMaine

Your Union campaign seeks student support for Union renovation

On The Net

funds.

Those in attendance at the event said they thought the organization had overcome its challenges, and were happy to see the first of the long-awaited grants being dispensed.

"They were all complaining. Now it's quiet," Boateng said of his organization's critics. "They've seen action, they've seen responses."

Several recipients said the grant would help them grow as a group. Joseph Hayes, a member of the men's mentorship group Brothers in Recovery, called the process an "excellent opportunity" for the corporation. His organization was funded $16,250 to hold a retreat and workshops about health and self defense.

Another recipient, Wendy Hillard, whose namesake foundation received $9,750 to hold gymnastics classes for locals at Riverbank State Park, said the corporation's ability to fund local groups "really makes a difference."

The corporation received 101 applications requesting a combined $18.5 million in grants.

"We decided that we would go wide versus deep," Boateng said, choosing a large number of small grants over a few very large ones. He said the long-term goal of the corporation was to build a "community trust fund" to support local organizations.

A second round of grants will open in June, with awards to be distributed in September. Boateng said at the CB9 meeting that he hoped the WHLDC would continue operating even after it finished awarding the Columbia funds. That would involve finding other funding sources for the long-term.

Casey Tolan contributed reporting.

christian.zhang@columbiaspectator.com | @christizhang

Email this	0 Comments	Share on Facebook	Digg This!
----------------------------	----------------------------	-----------------------------------	----------------------------

Read more here:

Copyright 2013

Comments are closed.

College students that are looking to get great dresses deals with more options and more savings, should check out dressale.com.

College students looking for China suppliers of tablets, laptops and more, should research online Chinese supplier websites.

College students that are interested in building mobile phone applications should reach out to app developers los angeles to better understand how mobile apps are built and learn about the technology behind each mobile app.

Check out DHgate.com collect China wholesale products: cheap tablets, unique cell phone cases and electronics for College students.

Find new business opportunities easily on Made-in-China.com!